

College of Saint Benedict and Saint John's University

DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU

Administration Publications

Administration

6-5-2014

Ending commencement season on a positive note

Michael Hemesath

College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's University, mhemesath@csbsju.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/admin_pubs

Part of the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Hemesath M. 2014 June 5. Ending commencement season on a positive note [blog]. Quad 136. [Accessed 2017 June 5]. <http://blogs.csbsju.edu/mhemesath/2014/06/05/ending-commencement-season-on-a-positive-note/>.

This Blog Post is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Administration Publications by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@csbsju.edu.

Quad 136

Note

Previous Next

Ending Commencement Season on a Positive Note

Stephanie Mitchell/Harvard Staff Photographer

Former New York Mayor and businessman Michael Bloomberg gave a commencement speech at Harvard recently that took aim at the politicization of commencements. He said, “This spring, it has been disturbing to see a number of college commencement speakers withdraw—or have their invitations rescinded—after protests from students and—to me, shockingly—from senior faculty and administrators who should know better.”

In his speech he also noted the importance of diverse views and ideas on our college campuses:

There is an idea floating around college campuses—including here at Harvard—that scholars should be funded only if their work conforms to a particular view of justice. There’s a word for that idea: censorship. And it is just a modern-day form of McCarthyism.

Think about the irony: In the 1950s, the right wing was attempting to repress left wing ideas. Today, on many college campuses, it is liberals trying to repress conservative ideas, even as conservative faculty members are at risk of becoming an endangered species. And perhaps nowhere is that more true than here in the Ivy League.

In the 2012 presidential race, according to Federal Election Commission data, 96% of all campaign contributions from Ivy League faculty and employees went to Barack Obama. Ninety-six percent. There was more disagreement among the old Soviet Politburo than there is among Ivy League donors.

It is fitting to end the 2014 commencement season with this apt description of the mission of higher education offered by Bloomberg:

A university’s obligation is not to teach students what to think but to teach students how to think. That requires listening to the other side, weighing arguments without prejudice.

At the College of Saint Benedict and Saint John's University that might succinctly be described as “listening with the ear of the heart.” — Saint Benedict, 6th Century.

By Michael Hemesath | June 5th, 2014 | Categories: Higher Education | 0 Comments

About the Author: Michael Hemesath

Michael Hemesath is the 13th president of Saint John's University. A 1981 SJU graduate, Hemesath is the first layperson appointed to a full presidential term at SJU. You can find him on Twitter [at] PrezHemesath.