

College of Saint Benedict and Saint John's University

DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU

Administration Publications

Administration

9-29-2014

Externalities and the Saint John's community

Michael Hemesath

College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's University, mhemesath@csbsju.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/admin_pubs

Part of the Economics Commons, and the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Hemesath M. 2014 Sept 29. Externalities and the Saint John's community [blog]. Quad 136. [Accessed 2017 June 7]. <http://blogs.csbsju.edu/mhemesath/2014/09/29/externalities-and-the-saint-johns-community/>.

This Blog Post is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Administration Publications by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@csbsju.edu.

Quad 136

Community

◻ Previous Next ◻

Externalities and the Saint John's Community

One of the most important lectures economists give in their principles of economics courses revolves around externalities. If you are a little fuzzy on your econ principles, externalities result when the action taken by an individual or firm imposes costs (a negative externality) or provides benefits (a positive externality) to someone other than the actor. The classic negative externality is pollution—a brewer dumps polluted water in the river and those downstream are harmed by poor water quality if the brewer does not compensate them for these costs.

When you are part of a community, you are often judged, fairly or not, by the actions of others in that community. This can cut both ways—being unfairly criticized due to the inappropriate actions of some or benefitting from the good work and character of others in your community. Of course the Saint John's community is not made up exclusively of saints (though there are a few), but in the last few months I have been reminded by others from outside our community of how many wonderful people we have in this community.

1. There was the great story of the SJU ruggers and their supporters that I wrote about last May.
2. There was the mother who told me she wanted her son to go to Saint John's because she admired the character of the Johnnies she had met in her professional life.
3. There was the Gustie who told his Johnnie neighbor that he and his friends were envious of the sense of connection Johnnies had to Saint John's and to each other even decades after graduation.
4. Finally, there was this recent communication that was shared with me (it was originally sent to golf coach Bob Alpers):

Today while golfing at Blackberry, my friend and I encountered a couple of your [SJU] golfers. I wish I knew their names. We had a casual conversation, asked about the team and their first match. They were the most polite and respectful young men I've dealt with in a long time. What great ambassadors for SJU and your program! Keep up the good work and good luck this year!

Virtue is its own reward, of course, but my thanks to our many great alums. Keep generating those positive externalities!

By Michael Hemesath | September 29th, 2014 | Categories: Economics, Higher Education | 0 Comments

About the Author: Michael Hemesath

Michael Hemesath is the 13th president of Saint John's University. A 1981 SJU graduate, Hemesath is the first layperson appointed to a full presidential term at SJU. You can find him on Twitter [at] PrezHemesath.