Student borrowing and debt: a smart investment, not a crisis

Michael Hemesath
College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's University, mhemesath@csbsju.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/admin_pubs

Part of the Economics Commons, and the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation

This Blog Post is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Administration Publications by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@csbsju.edu.
Student Borrowing and Debt: A Smart Investment, Not a Crisis

There has been a lot of discussion about student loans and the debt burden borne by college graduates (and non-graduates). Total student loan debt has now reached $1 trillion dollars and some commentators are predicting a higher education bubble not unlike the housing bubble. I think much of this talk is hyperbole and the debt concerns are overblown. Here is a link to some recent musings, published in the St. Cloud Times, on borrowing and student debt using data from Saint John's University students, who I believe are representative of many college students: To a Higher Degree, October 27, 2013

Michael Hemesath

Michael Hemesath is the 13th president of Saint John's University. A 1981 SJU graduate, Hemesath is the first layperson appointed to a full presidential term at SJU. You can find him on Twitter [at] PrezHemesath.