

2015

I Know Women

Mara Faulkner OSB

College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's University, mfaulkner@csbsju.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/headwaters>

Recommended Citation

Faulkner, Mara OSB (2015) "I Know Women," Headwaters: Vol. 28, 61-62.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/headwaters/vol28/iss/12>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Headwaters by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@csbsju.edu.

I Know Women

I know women and even girls who want to leap out of the boat of their bodies—

that leaky skin craft with its fragile ribs, its clumsy opaqueness whose every heavy movement is ambiguous and veiled.

Even with unsleeping eyes on every side peering into the dark squall they know that, embodied, they are in danger as they brace once more to meet the waves.

Not even the consolation of rain on flesh can make them love
the sheer weight of it

each single part imperfect, prone to pain judged pretty or despised.

Women want to be pure mind, light invisible as air

free and beautiful like the idea of song that doesn't seem to need the pumping lungs

the husky, muscled larynx the pink and flabby tongue.

They can't believe that Jesus once set free
would return to his body with cries of joy

as to a long-lost friend.

Mara Faulkner, OSB, is Professor Emerita of English, College of Saint Benedict.