

2018

Angels

Chet Corey
studio1@csbsju.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/studio_one

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Corey, Chet (2018) "Angels," Studio One: Vol. 43, 51.

Available at: https://digitalcommons.csbsju.edu/studio_one/vol43/iss1/38

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Studio One by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@CSB/SJU. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@csbsju.edu.

Angels

Angels are no stranger than the whiskered face of a sea otter, eyes large and warm. Or the frost-white face of a walrus, tusks like ice sickles sagging down the eaves of rooflines. Angels are as close as Mt. Everest to cloud. As close to Mt. Fuji as a Sumi-e master's brushstroke. As close as ink on the horsehair bristle of his brush. Closer than windowpane to windowlight--that morning hour's first light looking in on our naked selves with sea otter eyes--with that frost-white walrus face of God up against window glass look! And so how is it that we should arise and go, knowing that our eyes are the windows that angels are looking into and that their gaze is the gaze of love and light.

-Chet Corey
Bloomington, MN