The Clerk’s Tale

OR, THE WORST CINDERELLA STORY EVER
“O stormy peple! Unsad and evere untrewe!
Ay undiscreet and chaungynge as a fane!
Delitynge evere in rumbul that is newe,
For lyk the moone ay wexe ye and wane!
Ay ful of clappynge, deere ynogh a jane!
Youre doom is fals, youre constance yvele preeveth;
A ful greet fool is he that on yow leeveth.”

Thus seyden sadde folk in that citee,
Whan that the peple gazed up and doun,
For they were glad, right for the noveltee,
To han a newe lady of hir toun.
Namoore of this make I now mencioun,
But to Grisilde again wol I me dresse,
And telle hir constance and hir busyness.

(IV.995-1008)
Chaucer gave the Griselda story to the Oxford Clerk in order to engage with the theological controversies of the late 14\textsuperscript{th} century, specifically Wycliffism/early Lollardy and the realist-nominalist debate.

Anticlericalism and “Poor Priests”

The Parson

“...a povre person of a toun,
But riche he was of hooly thoght and werk.
He was also a lerned man, a clerk,
That Cristes gospel trawely wolde preche;
His parisshens devoutly wolde he teche.”

(I.478-82)

“This noble ensample to his sheep he yaf,
That first he wroghte, and afterward he taughte.”

(I.496-7)
Anticlericalism and “Poor Priests”

The Oxford Clerk

He “looked holwe,” his clothes appeared “[f]ul thredbare,” and he spent his money “[o]n books and on lernynge.”

(I.289,290,300)

“he hadde geten hym yet no benefice, Ne was so worldly for to have office.”

(I.291-2)

“And gladly wolde he lerne and gladly teche.”

(I.308)
